

Group 1: Young woman using a wheelchair

Traditional model	“She has been bewitched; she will never get married”.
Charity model	“What a pity, this beautiful woman is bound to a wheelchair. She’ll never be able to marry, have children and care for her family”.
Medical model	“Oh this poor woman. She should go to a doctor to discuss with him if there is a therapy which could enable her to walk again, like everyone else”.
Social model	“The community really should build ramps in front of public buildings, so that persons like her can participate in social life”.
Rights-based model	“When she gets a job, her employer will have to build accessible rooms. This is her right!”

Group 2: Man with an intellectual disability

Traditional model	“How sad... demons must be controlling his intellect”.
Charity model	“Look at this poor confused man; he seems to be mentally retarded. It would be better for him to live in a home, where somebody will take care of him”.
Medical model	“Perhaps there is some medicine or treatment which could improve his perception. He should try a psychiatrist”.
Social model	“It’s a good solution that he lives with his brother, so that he is within the community like others”.
Rights-based model	“Let’s go and ask him where he wants to live?”

Group 3: Parents with a hearing impaired daughter

Traditional model	“Poor girl. She is being punished for her mother’s stealing habits”.
Charity model	“It must be very sad having a child and knowing that she will never be able to live on her own”.
Medical model	“I’m sure in a few years there’ll be a hearing aid available which will make this child able to hear better”.
Social model	“We should all learn sign-language, so that we can communicate with this child and all other hearing-impaired people”.
Rights-based model	“When this child grows up, she’ll study at university if she wants to”.

Group 4: Boy with a visual impairment

Traditional model	“His mother must have been with another man – not her husband”
--------------------------	--

Charity model	“Oh poor boy – he’ll never be independent. Give him some money”
----------------------	---

Medical model	“Let’s hope one day an operation will enable him to see like normal people”
----------------------	---

Social model	“We need to ensure there are no hazards in the hallways or signs he might bump into”

Rights-based model	“He has the same rights to go to school as anyone else”
