From CBR to CBID

From CBR to CBID

- A rights-based and development-oriented approach for promoting inclusive development.
- A strategy now implemented by more than 100 countries to achieve the UN CRPD.

From CBR to CBID

- The use of the word 'rehabilitation' in the CBR title may imply that interventions are still focused only on clinical areas.
- Rehabilitation remains a vital aspect but is one of many interventions required.

From CBR to CBID

- CBR is a term that some development stakeholders, may still view as a medical only strategy.
- There are also CBR programmes whose approach remains very traditionally in the medical field who further fuel this perspective of CBR.

From CBR to CBID

- Some stakeholders working in specific areas of the CBR Matrix may not see themselves as CBR stakeholders.
- This can limit their support of CBR, their collaboration with other actors, and their recognition of the relevance of CBR to them and their work.

From CBR to CBID

- CBID is a term that more accurately describes a strategy that covers all areas of life to achieve the inclusion of persons with disabilities.
- It reflects a rights-based approach that respects differences and acknowledges and accepts diversity as part of human life.
- Inclusive development engages society to remove barriers.

From CBR to CBID

- Inclusive development is a global strategy that development stakeholders identify with and see as their responsibility.
- Therefore, by using the term CBID in place of CBR, we can more strongly encourage everyone to take responsibility for the inclusion of all.
